Hello World! 🙋

My name is Dennis and I thrive in the sweet spot between people and systems.

That's where I get my spark always asking questions like:

What does the user really need?

Where are we losing momentum?

And how can we make this flow just a little bit better?

My journey didn't start in design tools it started on shop floors and on dance stages across the world. 🌍 Selling fruit at ICA and judging locking and street dance battles abroad might sound like two different universes but they taught me the same core lesson: read people create flow build trust. That mindset has followed me into everything I do.

Today I work 75% as a cashier lead at Hornbach where I'm responsible for front flow self-scanning returns and quality at the cash area. It's a fast-paced environment where structure clarity and human presence matter every single minute. I coach colleagues reduce friction handle edge cases and make sure both customers and staff feel safe seen and supported. It's hands-on leadership in real time and I genuinely enjoy it.

Alongside retail I've built my path in UX and experience design 🎨. I've worked on projects like Red Milk a safety app and FastDev SaaS platforms where complexity was the norm and my role was to make things feel understandable usable and human. I've facilitated agile workshops built prototypes tested with real users and seen how tiny adjustments can completely change an experience. That's the kind of impact that keeps me curious.

But I'm not just UX. I've been a project lead a team manager a customer service rep and yes sometimes still the person making sure things simply work. I like stepping into the gaps connecting dots and translating between perspectives. Tech to people. Strategy to reality. Vision to action. 🚀

Outside work titles dance has shaped me deeply. Teaching performing judging and building communities taught me rhythm timing empathy and how to lead without ego. Those lessons show up daily whether I'm guiding a team designing a flow or supporting someone in the moment.

I'm curious solution-driven and social. I enjoy asking the extra question challenging assumptions and exploring better ways of doing things and honestly, I just love working. Digging into problems exchanging ideas 💡 and building things people actually use. That's my jam.

So, who am I really?

A mix of UX designer agile-minded coordinator retail lead and street dancer. Someone who brings energy structure and curiosity whether it's improving a system leading a team or shaping a better experience.

Let's build something that not only works but feels right.

Warmly,

Dennis Lantz
